AusAPT Vic & Tas SATURDAY LEARNING EXPERIENCE - 12th May 2007

"The Archetypes in Theory and Practice"

Presenters: Andrew Gibson and Patricia Sexton

"Archetypes provide the deep structure for human motivation and meaning. When archetypes are encountered in art, literature, sacred texts, and advertising – or in individuals or groups – they evoke emotional resonance and become the unconscious frameworks that determine how and why people think and react."

<http://www.capt.org/discover-your-archetypes/about-archetypes.htm>.

Our Saturday Learning Experience, presented by Andrew Gibson and Patricia Sexton, will provide the following Likely Outcomes:

- 1. Participants will have developed a deeper and clearer appreciation of the underlying theories of psychological type and individual differences, through the study of John Beebe's hypothesis as reflected in movies and TV series.*
- 2. Participants will become more aware of and confident about practical applications of psychological type and archetypal reactions, through exercises exploring these aspects of their own typology.*

When: Saturday 12th May 2007, 10 am to 4 pm. Lunch, tea & coffee provided.

Where: The Metropole Hotel Conference Centre,
44 Brunswick Street, Fitzroy. (Melway Ref: 2C: A11)

Cost: AusAPT members $75.00 Non-members $120.00

NB: Pre-Session Material – On receipt of registration, you will be sent a preliminary exercise and some recommended pre-reading to ensure all participants have a minimal knowledge base.

Who are Andrew Gibson and Patricia Sexton?

Andrew is an experienced trainer with the Institute of Type Development, and is a Counsellor and Psychotherapist in private practice. He has completed a Masters degree of Analytical Psychology and has held positions on the NSW branch and national body of AusAPT. Current interests include the use of Beebe's extended model in counselling, including communication, conflict and stress.

Patricia is an organisation development consultant and her work encompasses community, public sector and business. She uses Psychological Type and archetypes as tools to broaden responses and increase the choices available. Patricia is the President of Organisation Development Australia and has a passion for buying "renovators' delights".
